JAVA WANTS TO BE INDUSTRIAL LIKE JAPAN

(By Associated Press.)

The Hague, Netherlands, Oct. 9.—Java is turning its gaze on the enormous modern industrial development in Japan, and asking why, with its 30,000,000 industrious people, it should not emulate Japan. The Dutch minister for the colonies charged Henri Hubert van Kol, Socialist member of the first chamber of parliament, with an inquiry into Japan's industrial evolution and Mr. Van Kol's report strongly urges that the Japanese government's many-sided activities in encouraging and fostering the large industries shall be adopted and improved upon by the Dutch authorities in Java.

Mr. Van Kol shows that, while in 1890 Japan's export of industrial products formed 18 per cent of the whole, in 1902 this had risen to 38 per cent and in 1913 to 45 per cent; whereas agricultural exports declined from 51.6 per cent to 37.8 and 35.7.

His main recommendation to the Netherlands government is that a central bureau for native industry shall be established in Java, following the example of Japan, which body would further industrial development by the gathering of data, by subsidies, erection of model factories and the like, and incidentally by an inquiry into the possibility of silk culture in the Dutch East Indies.

The theory of racial incapacity of adjustment to industrial conditions has been exploded, says Mr. Van Kol, by the experience with the Japanese. Indeed, he regards conditions in Java and the qualities of the Japanese, "the most docile people on earth," as in many respects particularly favorable to industrial development.

JOHN BULL ALSO SAID TO REFLECT LEANNESS

(By Associated Press.)

London, Oct. 9.—Is the national English type becoming thinner than it used to be? Professor Keith, before the British Association at Newcastle, said that John Bull is reflecting in his physical being something of the leanness of war times.

Professor Keith told the Association that the face of the typical Englishman is becoming longer and thinner. London is now full of Colonial soldiers—bronzed, spare, lean, aquiline and with prominent cheekbones, and the speaker infers that the English type in the future will come nearer in their faces to approximating these visitors than the bluff, country squire, John Bull.

It is pointed out that the typical "City Man" or financial district business man is perceptibly thinner than was his father. The farmer has lost his plumpness. The retired army officer is a sparer figure. Even the country squire—the last survival of the now fast-disappearing England—bears a closer resemblance to Don Quixote than to John Bull.

HANOVER MERCHANTS TO OUST WOMEN CLERKS

(By Associated Press.)

Hanover, Germany, Oct. 9.—The Hanover Merchantile Association has entered into an agreement with a number of other business organizations in Hanover, whereby a strenuous effort will be made to oust women from the positions they now occupy, after the war, and to replace them with men who are now in the field.

According to the contract which has been drawn up between the various organizations, no position ordinarily held by a man may be offered to women at all. This applies to positions in trade, in stores and counter rooms. Women may not even be informed that positions are open.

The associations have also agreed that positions paying below a certain standard shall not be advertised either to men or women. The city of Hanover has fixed a new scale whereby the minimum wage scale for employees under 18 years of age shall be 900 marks, 1,800 for employees between 18 and 20 and 1,200 marks for all employees over 20.
